

Past Tense

How is the past tense formed in Czech?

How can it be translated into English?

What complications of past-tense usage need to be noted?

The past tense in Czech is formed by combining an auxiliary verb – which indicates the person and number of the verb's subject – with a past form of the main verb. The past form of the main verb is called the past participle or the l*-participle, and it agrees in gender and number with the subject of the verb.

Here are some examples of the past tense that have been analyzed for auxiliary verb (bolded) and l-participle (bolded and underlined):

Tam jsme celou noc tancovali.
We danced all night there.

Byli jste někdy v České republice?
Have you ever been in the Czech Republic?

Když jsem byla malá, bydlela jsem v Austrálii.
When I was little, I used to live in Australia.

Už máš, co jsi chtěl?
Do you already have what you wanted?

Moře vypadalo jako zrcadlo.
The sea looked like a mirror.

Hokejisté vyhráli zlato!
The hockey players won gold!

Nečekaně zemřel zpěvák Petr Muk.
The singer Petr Muk has unexpectedly died.

Psi štěkali a kočky mňoukaly.
The dogs were barking and the cats were meowing.

Notice that the Czech past tense can be translated variously into English. Thus the past-tense form Bydlel/Bydlela jsem... could be rendered — depending on the context that it occurs in — as I was living..., I lived..., I have lived..., or I used to live...

Notice also that the auxiliary verb in third-person singular and plural (the last four examples above) is a null verb. In other words, there is no auxiliary verb for these cases; the l-participle alone suffices to render the past tense.

Finally note the various forms of the l-participle as it takes endings appropriate to the number and gender of the subject: -l (masculine singular); -la (feminine singular or neuter plural); -lo (neuter singular); -li (masculine animate plural); -ly (feminine plural and masculine inanimate plural).

Given their need to be in grammatical agreement, l*-participles for the pronoun vy cover a whole range of possibilities depending on the number and gender of the vy subject:

Byl jste někdy v Praze?	The addressee is one male.
Byla jste někdy v Praze?	The addressee is one female.
Byli jste někdy v Praze?	The addressee is plural and contains at least one male.
Byly jste někdy v Praze?	The addressee is plural and all female.

To see how these factors play out in all the past-tense forms of a given verb, here is the past paradigm of být followed by some examples of its usage:

Singular		Plural
(já) byl / byla jsem	(my)	byli / byly jsme
(ty) byl / byla jsi	(vy)	byli / byly jste	[sg formal: byl / byla jste ]
(on) byl	(oni)	byli
(ona) byla	(ony)	byly
(ono) bylo	(ona)	byla

Byla jsem celý víkend v práci.
I [fem] was at work all weekend.

Všichni tři byli docela normální kluci.
All three were completely normal boys.

Ještě jsme v Americe nebyly.
We [fem pl] haven't been to America yet.

Holky byly unavené.
The girls were tired.

Okno bylo rozbito.
The window was broken.

S kým jsi byl nejvíce spokojen?
Who were you [masc sg] most satisfied with?

Kde jste byli minulý týden?
Where were you [masc pl] last week?

Kdo už byl někdy v Evropě?
Who has ever been to Europe?

psát:	psal, psala...
minout:	minul, minula...

Some monosyllabic verbs in -át retain the long vowel in the past; common examples include hrát (hrál, hrála), stát (stál, stála), bát se (bál se, bála se), and přát (přál, přála).

Many verbs have l-participles that cannot be predicted from the infinitive and must be memorized, although sometimes they share something in common with the non-past conjugation. Some common examples include the following:

péct:	pekl, pekla...
říct:	řekl, řekla...	non-past: řeknu, řekneš...
číst:	četl, četla...	non-past: čtu, čteš...
jíst:	jedl, jedla...	non-past: (oni) je dí
pomocť:	pomohl, pomohla...
mocť:	mohl, mohla...	non-past: (já) mo hu
jít:	šel, šla...

Word order and the past tense

Past-tense auxiliary verbs are generally found in the second position in a sentence or clause. This is evident in all the examples given here.

Some further complications

For reflexive verbs used in the past-tense ty form, the auxiliary verb jsi combines with the reflexive se and si to yield ses and sis respectively:

Jak bylo? Měla ses dobře? Povědej a nic nevynech!
 How was it? Did you have a good time? Tell me and don't leave anything out!
 mít se = měla ses

Co sis koupil jako suvenýr?
 What did you buy yourself for a souvenir?
 koupit si = koupil sis

Mlčky jsi stál a ty ses bál mluvit.
 You stood quietly and you were afraid to speak.
 bát se = bál ses

In spoken Czech, the -l of the masculine singular form of some l-participles is often dropped. These are usually short verbs and always end in a stem-final consonant. Common examples include:

říct:	řekl > řek
-------	------------

mocht:            mohl > moh

Also in spoken Czech, the jsi auxiliary can shorten to -s and combine with the initial word of the clause. Examples include:

Tys tam nebyla!
You weren't there!

Je skvělý, že*s* všechny ty testy tak zvládla.
It's great that you aced all those tests.

Cos tam dělal?
What were you doing there?
